

Dear Parents,

This week in the Bouncy the People Trainer program, we set very high expectations for your child: that he or she is born for greatness. Because your child is born for greatness, he or she will need special training to get ready to take a place of leadership in the world.

For this reason, we are reading Born for Greatness, Me, You and the Dalai Lama, by Bouncy the People Trainer. It is the story of a disabled dog and a poor boy from Tibet. Both of them, through training and perseverance, overcame poverty, dislike for sitting still, and behavior problems to become two of the world's greatest teachers.

Ask your child to tell you about the story. Talk about what greatness means to you, how happy you would be if your child did something truly great in the world, and how important it is to work hard at school to help make that happen. You can get your own electronic copy of Born for Greatness with audio at the iBook store, or ask your librarian to order a print copy.

Sincerely,
